

psyclick.org.uk

a resource for prospective clinical psychologists psyclick is a website designed for anyone hoping to train as a clinical psychologist (including assistant psychologists)

Some aspects may also be of interest to trainees and qualified clinicians psyclick is interactive - if you think there's something missing, send it in!

Here's what's available at present:

- ⌚ Forum - questions, answers and discussions on topics like gaining experience, applying to courses, interviews - it's up to you!
- ⌚ Reading suggestions - books, articles, Government papers and websites that are worth a look
- ⌚ Original articles - brief essays on personal thoughts and experiences
- ⌚ Top tips - on 'getting a foot in the door', making the most of jobs, interviews and applications
- ⌚ Local graduate groups - get involved in your area, make some connections in the profession
- ⌚ Job information - where to find work, what to think about and what to look out for
- ⌚ Links to useful resources - websites, organisations and NHS stuff worth knowing about
- ⌚ What's new - receive free emails when psyclick is updated psyclick welcomes input from clinical psychologists at every career stage, so if you have any ideas, stories, suggestions or gems of advice, please share them

psyclick is independent of any organisation, and is originated and maintained by an assistant psychologist
